To The Class of 1979:

Principals when addressing students tend to become too "preachy." It is an occupational hazard. Consequently, if I get too "preachy," please excuse me.

At a time when it is camp to be critical and condemnatory of education, I encourage each of you to reflect upon the education you have been exposed to during your school life, and in particular your high school life. If you fall victim to generalizations relative to education, you give up your independence and objectivity. It is the easy way. Rather ask yourself some difficult questions about your contributions to your own education. What did you bring to the classroom? Certainly, there were times when you probably viewed your education and educators as inflexible, uninteresting, unsympathetic. But could you honestly question the motives of your teachers or your principal, for all their actions are initiated in your best interests. If you objectively review your education, you cannot help but come to one conclusion: Learning is difficult; teaching is difficult.

Each day you are propelled toward assuming your role as an adult in our society. We hope that we have given you sufficient tools and skills to be successful in that role.

Truly you are the light of the world. My best wishes to you all.

Congratulations To
The Class Of 1979!

I wandered as half a river
My waters going nowhere.
I wandered without a shadow
My body all alone in the sun.
I wandered as a rootless tree
The earth not knowing me.
I wandered as a wingless bird
The sky forgetting me.
I was lightening with no thunder
I was a flower with no rain.
I was a stranger to Spring
And winter was home to me.
At last my Summer came.

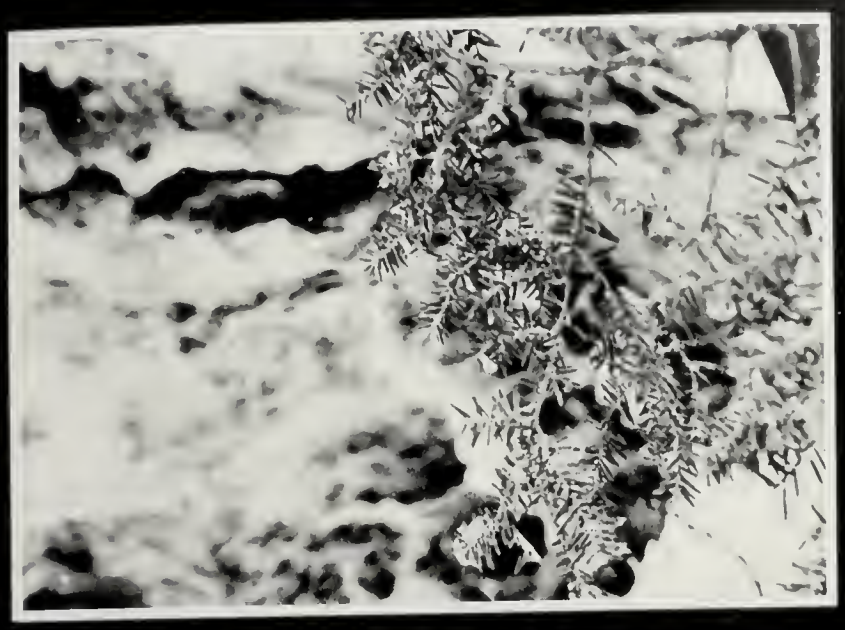
Everyman's Song

I saw him as the
Vibrating string
Of his guitar-
Dark and blue and meloncholy
Caring only for his sound.
His echo on his mind,
Swaying back and forth and round.

I tried to understand and
Grasp his meaning
With the chord,
But found only a wall
With all the reasonsing left behind,
A many mirrored image
And a self in search of Time.

Claire Marrone



The View Behind Reality

Now, some cheat by peaking behind the clouds
And get a hearty gust of laughter out of themselves
For fooling the sunlight
But they miss the sounds of the sky
And the snow crackling and falling
On the mountainous mounds of sky
That rule the moon
They don't see this beauty
of a world
Formless and flying

Stu Carpey

Exit Reality

The endless days.
No time to keep track of time
Bliss became a passtime easily aquired.
The beach.
Infinite grains of sand
All suddenly became significant.
Seagulls
Spoke my name and sang my song.
Ocean..
Caught my emotions; set me free
Lonlines
All alone with me
Finally discovering myself,
The calmness of my existence.
And the Sudden shock
When. I awoke.

Embarrassed or what?

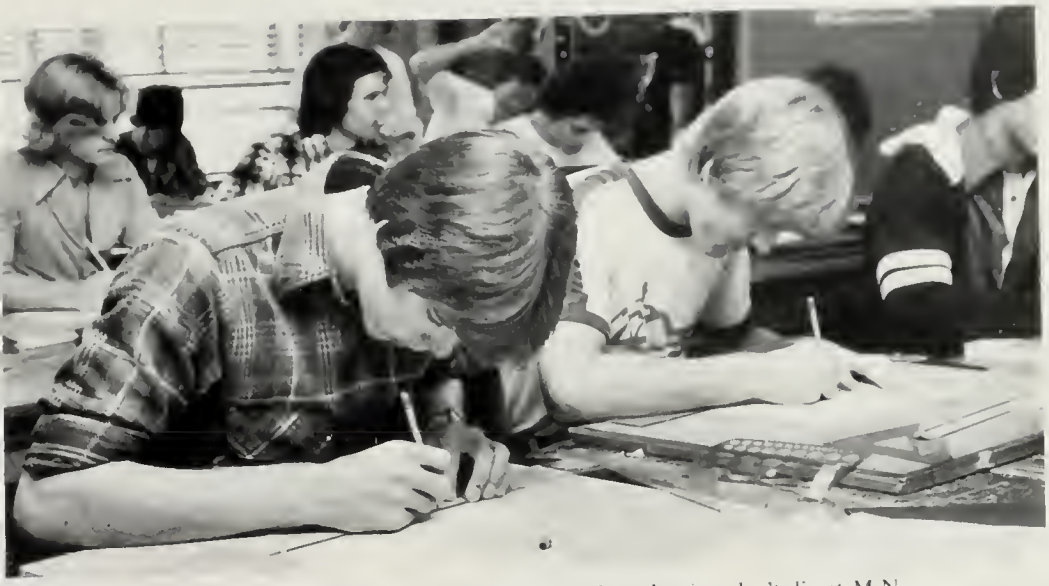
Get out of here. I didn't put the rat in the candy machine.

Karen's hair, before the electric shock.



They keep stabbing, but the cockroaches just don't die at M.N.

(for J.B.)

Brown-eyed windows
And crushed roses on new fallen snow
caress the face
of a child.
Frustrated soul
yearns to fly
but its wings are weak
unable to support
the heavy heart it harbors.

Tracie Kennedy

Key to a Chamber

Reflections in the water
Of two wind-burned faces
Ice castles are formed
over everlasting time.
Inside, two hearts are locked.
Angels in the snowbanks
Mark the end of innocence.
Branches laden with frozen teardrops
Are melted by a fire.
The sun melts the moon,
A horizon for eternity.
Two hands lock the drawbridge
For their entrance alone.

Amy Sassler

Hope, an inward energy.
A flower in winter.
The rainbow's end.
A fantasy come true.
Tomorrow's friend,
A God to a dying man.
A Mountain stream flowing toward
the setting sun
Shimmering
